Introduction

How much text should be in the poster? If there’s too much text the readers will lose interest and move on. Limit your text to the bare minimum and give more detailed information in a handout to interested viewers. If possible use bullet points and phrases over whole paragraphs. One source suggested a maximum of 800 words.

Font sizes: Make the section titles about 48 point text. The body text of a poster should be about 24-36 point. 18 point for captions and labels.
